

Project Mosaic is a UK-based charity that teaches people to be more tolerant of those coming from a different background, whether racial, ethnic, religious, national or economic. It promotes interfaith and intercultural tolerance, multiethnic good citizenship and integration of immigrant communities, and counters prejudice, group hatred and extremism – through its Lecture Series, Global Citizen Programme and Young Filmmakers YouTube Film Competition. Project Mosaic was set up in memory of David Fontana, one of the 343 firefighters who died on September 11, 2001 while helping to rescue people from the World Trade Towers in New York.
